FIFA World Cup™ Sponsorship Strategy

Ahead of the 2018 and 2022 FIFA World Cup™ tournaments, FIFA offers companies the opportunity to purchase regional sponsorship packages for the first time. Announced at the end of 2013, the new commercial structure provides significant opportunities and value for interested companies.

Sponsorship plays a huge role in FIFA’s work to develop football all over the world and stage world-class events. Without the support of the Commercial Affiliates, events such as the FIFA World Cup would simply not be possible. They not only offer financial support to the events, but logistical support on the ground. Sponsors are vital in connecting FIFA events to football fans all over the world, running promotions and giving people the once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to experience events.

FIFA’s innovative commercial structure was introduced in 2015 for the 2018 and 2022 FIFA World Cup™ tournaments. The top two tiers remain mostly unchanged from the previous model, with a total of 14 companies occupying the FIFA Partner and FIFA World Cup Sponsor positions. However, the third tier has been transformed from National Supporters – limited to companies within the host country – to Regional Supporters, which cover five predefined regions around the globe. This tier provides regional sponsorship rights to up to 20 brands from North and Central America, South America, Europe, the Middle East and Africa, and Asia.

The regional approach offers a targeted way for Commercial Affiliates to engage with their target audience, offering companies who do not have the desire or the means to enter into a global sponsorship agreement to acquire rights which cover a significant geographical region.

- FIFA Partners have the highest level of association with FIFA and all FIFA events as well as playing a wider role in supporting the development of football around the world, from grassroots right up to the top level at the FIFA World Cup™. This allows FIFA and its Partners to form a partnership beyond the FIFA World Cup™.
- FIFA World Cup™ Sponsors have rights to the FIFA Confederations Cup and the FIFA World Cup™ on a global basis. The main rights for a sponsor in this tier are brand association, the use of selected marketing assets and media exposure, as well as ticketing and hospitality offers for the events.
- The Regional Supporter level is the third level of FIFA’s sponsorship structure, allowing companies within the pre-defined global regions to promote an association with the respective FIFA event in the five regions.
The diagram below depicts how FIFA’s three-tier sponsorship structure is implemented for the 2018 and 2022 FIFA World Cup™ tournaments:
